Preparations for Friday gear up.

Preparations for the big day on Friday have intensified with rehearsals witnessed this morning at Uhuru Park the venue for the promulgation ceremony. The countdown is on with just a day to the signing ceremony expected to usher in a new dawn in the country's democratic and governance space. Eight heads of state are expected to attend the ceremony in which Kenyans from all walks of life will be witnessing the historic occasion.

Security remains tight in and around the Capital with some of the roads expected to be closed before and during the ceremony itself. The military chief Jeremiah Kianga says they will mount one of the biggest parades ever seen in the country in recent history.
